Commissioners want re-valuation, but not for $350,000 price

Randall County commissioners want a full re-valuation of property in the county, but they don't want to pay $350,000 for it. Commissioners, polled last week by The News, said they definitely believe a re-valuation is needed to equalize taxes, but they'd prefer to spend less than what firms specializing in such efforts say they want to do it. The re-valuation effort, which has so far cost the county about $26,000 for an in-house version, bogged down last month with the resignation of John Carrington, a $13,000 a year appraiser who went with a private business firm. Carrington's resignation left the re-appraisal office established under Mrs. Audrey Bruse without an experienced leader and commissioners for nearly a month have wavered on whether to continue an in-house type reappraisal effort or to hire an outside firm to provide for the complete re-valuation. Mrs. Bruse, tax assessor-collector, is to discuss Monday with commissioners whether to open sealed bids given by several outside firms for the job. While the bids have been given in sealed form, at least two companies interviewed by commissioners have indicated the cost for a re-appraisal could approach the $350,000 mark for a one-year program. Commissioners last week indicated they don't know how they will pay for such an outlay and that they hesitate to hike taxes simply for the purpose of re-valuating property to increase taxes. But, they're also unsure they can find a person qualified to take Carrington's place in the re-appraisal office under Mrs.

Bruse. "We've got to go ahead with it," County Judge Woody Pond said. "There needs to be an updating of values and restructuring of taxes and bring them up to date." Commissioners John Fulgenzi, Paul Lindsey and Dee Griffin agree that the re-valuation effort should not be abandoned. The county has never, at least in the memory of current county officials, had a re-valuation of property.

But, while they believe the county should continue the program, they aren't sure which way to proceed. "If we're going to do it," Fulgenzi said, "somewhere along the way we've got to get off high center." Fulgenzi said he would prefer to hire an experienced and competent person to head up the county's re-valuation office rather than hire an outside firm to complete the project.

The advantage of performing the re-appraisal in-house, he said, is that the trained staff available for the effort can be retained once the re-valuation is completed to continuously update county tax records. "The key to this thing is to get the right man in there," he said. "If he popped up tomorrow, we'd go with it."

"I still hope we can find this person. If we can't we may have to face reality and go outside and get it done." Lindsey also feels the county would be better served by continuing with the in-house effort. "I know we could do just as good a job (as an outside firm)," he said. "That would be the most economical, most feasible way to

Jacobs sees 'no chance' the board will accept new school site offer

Supt. Jerry Jacobs sees no chance that the Canyon school board will accept a site offered last week in Estacado Estates south of Amarillo for construction of a new elementary school. Gulf Republic Corporation, developer of the subdivision west of Bell Street and the Canyon E-Way in Amarillo, offered the site free of charge to the school district in a letter delivered Friday. Jacobs predicted the board will stand behind a decision announced last Tuesday night to construct a new elementary school on site at Sundown Lane and Western on the east side of the Canyon E-Way. The new school will be built if voters Tuesday approve the issuance of $2.9 million in bonds to finance the construction. Jacobs said the school staff, primarily Admin. Asst. W.V. McAlpin, conducted an intensive survey of available sites prior to the board's selection and still believes the Sundown-Western site most suitable for construction of the elementary school. The Gulf Republic letter contends the district would save about $100,000 by constructing a new elementary school in Estacado Estates rather than at Sundown-Western. Jacobs said Saturday it is likely very little money would be saved by accepting the Estacado Estates site. He said McAlpin's studies of six possible sites including the Estacado Estates site, indicate transportation costs will be cheaper at the Sundown-Western location. He acknowledged that it will cost an initial $90,000 to provide sewer and water for the selected site, but said most of that money will be made up through future connections as development increases around the site. "The one they (the board) selected is the best site for right now," Jacobs said. He said it is possible the board will consider Gulf Republic's proposal at a special Tuesday night session. The developer had offered the site originally last fall to the school district and then this winter withdrew the offer.

Canyon High School Principal John Sommer presents CHS's highest annual honors to Miss Sheryl Dees, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Myron Dees, and Allen Shankles, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Eads of Mesalero Park during Thursday night ceremonies. Sommer told a filled CHS auditorium crowd that the dual presentation of the Canyon High School Award to Miss Dees and Shankles was the first such presentation in the school's history.

LaGrone in jail here after stay in Potter Co.

Jerry N. LaGrone, who was making $600 per month while imprisoned in the Potter County Regional Stockade, is back in Randall County jail. LaGrone was returned to the Canyon facility by sheriff's deputies Thursday after Dist. Judge Bryan Poff, acting on a request from Dist. Atty. Randall Sherrod, signed an order for LaGrone's return. The News head learned in February of LaGrone's income while supposedly serving the first year of a two-year sentence on a conviction of driving while intoxicated, subsequent offense. Prior to February and since that time, the News has learned, LaGrone has attended meetings, has been seen in grocery stores and driving in Amarillo alone. The Potter County treasurer told the News in February LaGrone was drawing a $600 per month check from that county. He said the Canyon man went on the county payroll on Nov. 15, 1976. LaGrone had been found guilty of DWI 2 last June by a Randall County jury. He was sentenced in July by Judge Poff. The judge in his sentence provided a two-year sentence to be served as follows: "The first 12 months of the sentence to be served in the Potter County Regional Stockade and the next 12 months may be served on the work release program so long as the said Jerry Neal LaGrone complies with the rules and regulations of said institute." Gary D. Butler, education and work release coordinator at the Potter County stockade, wrote a letter earlier this year for LaGrone's criminal file concerning the prisoner, noting that he had been placed on work release in violation of the judge's sentence. Sherrod filed Thursday morning the following motion: "Comes now Randall Sherrod, criminal district attorney for Randall County, Texas and alleges that the court's order regarding punishment and incarceration of the above named defendant is not being complied with and enforced and that to insure enforcement of the court's order it is necessary to have the defendant returned to the custody of the sheriff of Randall County and by him kept in the Randall County jail where such order will be enforced. "Wherefore, petitioner prays the court to enter an order instructing T.L. Baker, sheriff of Potter County, to release said defendant, Jerry Neal LaGrone to the custody of W.C. Longest, sheriff of Randall County, to be by him kept until he has served his sentence." Poff's order, signed Thursday afternoon, said "the court having considered said petition is of the opinion that said petition is well taken and is hereby granted." LaGrone, former owner of LaGrone Funeral Home in Canyon and a former school board member, had been found guilty last summer of a subsequent felony driving while intoxicated offense which occurred in January 1975.

Tax alternatives due eye in special hearing Mon.

Possible use of a one per cent sales tax, an increase in luxury taxes, and establishment of a tax on oil and gas leaving Texas fields are expected to be among the proposals made Monday to a special House committee meeting here. Canyon Schools Supt. Jerry Jacobs said several alternatives have already been proposed to the Special House Committee on Alternatives to Public School Financing in other public hearings around the state. He said those alternatives are expected to receive consideration at the Canyon hearing. The special committee is to meet at 9 a.m. Monday in the activities center ballroom on the West Texas State University campus. The group is seeking recommendations for revenue sources other than the tax on real property for funding of public schools. They were invited to Canyon by Randall County Judge Woody Pond and State Representative Bob Simpson. The meeting is the seventh in a series of ten being conducted throughout the state. Members of the committee are Rep. Tom Massey, chairman; Rep. Fred Agnich, Dallas; Rep.

Wilhelmina Delco, Austin; Rep. Roy Blake, Nacogdoches; Rep. Frank Hartung, Houston; Rep. W.S. (Bill) Healy, Paducah; Rep. Dan Kubiak, Rockdale; Rep. Camm Lary, Jr., Burnett; and Rep. Ruben Torres, Brownsville. Invited to attend the meeting are school personnel, tax assessors-collectors, city and county

officials and the general citizenry. The committee requests that written copies of testimony be provided if possible. "When we started this study, House Speaker Bill Clayton told us this inquiry was 'one of the most important in recent legislative history and the response

Area farmers lose bout over weather

After a months-long bout, a group of Randall County and South Plains farmers and ranchers have lost their fight against two weather modification associations. The Texas Water Development Board has issued 6-month permits for cloud-seeding operations on the South Plains and in the southern part of Randall County to Atmospherics Inc. of Levelland, and Plains Weather Improvement Association of Hart. The permits allow Atmospherics Inc. to seed clouds for hail suppression from April 30, 1976 to Oct. 31, 1976, and Plains Weather Improvement Association to seed clouds for hail suppression from April 30 to Nov. 30. Nolan Henson, chairman of an informal group of farmers and ranchers calling themselves the Citizens for Natural Weather, said the group won't give up the fight. Henson, a South Randall County rancher, said the group will oppose any future efforts of the groups to seed clouds in the South Plains area. The group has contended for more than a year since

Metcalfe questions motives of gas firm

By LAURIE TELFAIR
A request Friday for a public hearing by Pioneer Natural Gas Company was seen here as an attempt to rally support for the status quo. "I don't know anything about it but I would think they're trying to justify the 100 per cent gas pass-through rate," city manager Glen Metcalfe said. "They want support in keeping the 100 per cent."

In Hereford, city manager Dudley Bayne, an outspoken critic of the gas company, commented: "Undoubtedly, they are trying to beat a special session of the legislature. We've done some hard pushing on this special session. "What they're trying to do is get the Railroad Commission to review all they've done and, presumably, okay the 100 per cent pass-through. "When they hold that public hearing, and a date hasn't been set, they've just requested it, we, of course, will be there." Metcalfe said he thought a public hearing would be beneficial.

"I think it has always been cloudy how they determine this pass-through. If they can set out a clear formula and show that it is justified, then that will be a good thing," Metcalfe said. In the announcement of the request for a hearing, Pioneer spokesman Bob Mills said the Railroad Commission would be asked "to review Pioneer's cost of gas for its West Texas system and to verify the correctness of its current cost of gas and the methods, techniques, policies and practices employed by Pioneer in obtaining a gas supply." Pioneer president K.B. Watson said, "The company feels that it has been extremely prudent in acquiring its gas supply in a market of rapidly rising prices over the past three years. This practice has resulted in Pioneer having the lowest gas acquisition cost among the larger gas companies in the State of Texas even though we have added more gas reserves than our sales in each of the past two years."

Despite what he feels is a very good record, Pioneer has been criticized, said Watson. Mills acknowledged that the pressure by Hereford officials and others influenced the gas company to call for the hearing. This voluntary action, said Mills, is unprecedented. Pioneer intends to file with the Commission in advance of the public hearing, copies of its gas purchase contracts which will be representative of the purchase contracts for each source of its

Third school bond election is Tuesday for $2.9 million

Canyon school officials are hoping the third time's the charm as district voters go to the polls Tuesday for their third chance to approve the issuance of bonds for new school construction. Voters will cast ballots for or against the issuance of $2,950,000 in bonds for construction of a new $1.3 million elementary school and $1.6 million in remodeling and new construction at the Canyon High School campus. The polls will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. Tuesday at the Canyon community center and at Gene Howe School. Absentee balloting ended at 5 p.m. Friday at the school administration building for the election. About 60 persons cast absentee ballots. Officials expected last week a lighter voter turn-out for the election due to the dismissal two weeks ago of West Texas State University and the elimination of several points of controversy from the ballot issue.

Voters turned down a $6 million bond issue proposal for construction of a new elementary school and a new high school in December. They likewise voted against a $5.5 million bond issue proposal for construction of a new elementary school and junior high school in February. As many as 9000 voters could vote in the Tuesday election but in February and December balloting the number was less than half that number. Should the Tuesday election approve the issuance of bonds, local school officials and Amarillo Bond Expert Bob Davis are expected to travel to New York City in early June to seek a new bond rating for the district.

WIN Mike Tanco

Supt. Jerry Jacobs has predicted the bond issue could hike taxes by about 11 per cent in future years to retire the bonded indebtedness of the district. Davis has told board members the current bond market is favorable for an issue and sale of bonds. An interest rate of between 5 and 6 per cent is anticipated. No formal opposition to the bond issue proposal had emerged as of week's end. Stan Collins, a local investor, re-affirmed his support of the bond issue proposal during last Tuesday's school board meeting after board members unveiled the proposed site for the new elementary school. Collins had been an active and high-contributing leader of opposition to the December and February proposals. Since the February and December defeats, board members have dealt with and attempted to resolve a number of issues which the school district staff determined might have been motivating factors for the negative votes.

Several Complaints Resolved

In an effort to make the bond issue proposals more palatable, the board in recent months has: *Granted a $3000 homestead exemption to district senior citizen property owners *Scaled down the size and cost of the proposed elementary school *Reverted to a less-open and more traditional classroom structure approach in the elementary school proposal *Eliminated some renovations from an original CHS improvement program *Eliminated construction of a new junior high or senior high

Action due now for elderly

On joining college system

A quirk of basic mathematics has worked perversely to increase taxes for senior citizens in the City of Canyon and the Canyon School District and city commissioners and school board members should act as soon as possible to re-affirm the spirit in which both groups passed the $3000 homestead exemption for the elderly.

The school board in recent action, because increased property valuations were needed for bond sale purposes as well as for income production, hiked the percentage of valuation on property from 40 per cent to 80 per cent.

Because the school district and city operate a joint tax office which works with a joint tax roll, city commissioners followed suit last week and raised the valuation from 40 per cent to 80 per cent but halved the tax rate to produce the same income.

The school district has yet to apply a rate to its formula for funding next year's school programs, but it's a cinch the tax rate will work to increase taxes for all residents.

By hiking the valuation ratio from 40 per cent to 80 per cent both governments immediately increased taxes, doubled them in fact, for senior citizens who have taken the $3000 homestead exemption granted by both governments.

City Manager Glen Metcalf and Supt. Jerry

Jacobs, who are never enthusiastic about giving up taxable property or tax revenue, reluctantly say they think their respective entities should review at some point in the future the effect of the hike in valuation ratios on senior citizens, perhaps with revision there-sult.

But the time for action on this issue is now.

City commissioners must not have intended to hike city taxes when they approved the change in tax formulas last week. But that was the result of their action for senior citizens. Only senior citizens will pay higher taxes next year due to the change.

While taxes are expected to rise next year for school taxpayers, the percentage of increase will be far greater for senior citizens.

It all adds up to an inequitable situation for a group of Canyon and CISD taxpayers, a good number of whom can ill afford to pay more taxes.

That the increases come due to the caprice of mathematics rather than the malice of government won't make them any easier to live with.

Both governments have it within their power to increase the amount of homestead exemption.

Action now to do so would be appropriate, if not the only fair and equitable thing to do, if both governments intend to retain an image of good will. — C.W.

By CARROLL WILSON

R.B. Cleland's idea to affiliate West Texas State University with the University of Texas System lacked only a handful of votes passing in the form of a resolution at the recent Randall County Democratic Convention.

It's an idea with merit, but with implications which just don't set well with folks bent on assuring the perceived autonomy of the university as it now exists.

In reality, affiliation with a major university system, whether with UT or Texas A&M, would probably do little to change the status quo of the university administratively.

It might, on the other hand, enhance the university's ability to attract students and state support.

Today's West Texas State administration has far less autonomy than did the administration of Dr. James P. Cornette back before Gov. Preston Smith formed a separate board of regents for WTSU.

That's a fact bemoaned by Dr. Lloyd Watkins, who during his three years at the university, has seen his power to make decisions affecting the course of the university eroded and deposited in the hands of a super board of regents in Austin, the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System.

The Coordinating Board, through legislative mandate, has become increasingly more powerful in recent years, taking over a watch-dog role. Specifically, the board has the final word on construction of new buildings on state college campuses. It has the final word on new program offerings, new degree offerings, and off-campus offerings.

It has a major hand in setting formulas for funding state colleges.

West Texas State is simply not autonomous. It operates within very strict parameters set out by the legislature and the coordinating board.

The university's own board of regents is also hamstrung by the new-found coordinating board power.

As concern over state spending for higher education increases, it is highly predictable that coordinating board power will be strengthened to deal with universities and their offerings.

In a very real sense, the coordinating board has far more to say about West Texas State's future than does the university's own board of regents.

In realistic terms, then, the demise of the local board which would come with affiliation with a university system board would be of questionable impact, amounting to little more than an even trade.

Affiliation with a university system might, in fact, increase the autonomy of the WTSU administration in handling the day-to-day activities of the university which have yet to be usurped by the coordinating board. A board meeting far from Canyon, concerning itself with the problems of several campuses rather than one, must of necessity be concurrently removed from campus affairs at only one of many campuses.

Alignment of WTSU with UT or A&M probably could not be expected to produce more revenue for the university.

The Arlington and El Paso campuses of the UT system have not since being taken into the system blown full grown into large, well financed universities.

What is important about affiliation is just the change of name.

In an era where student recruitment is a staple of campus existence, image becomes all-important and an institution's name can certainly have bearing on that image.

Texas A&M University at Canyon or UT-Canyon is far higher sounding than West Texas State University. Or at least potential students might think so.

Day-dreaming aside, the realities of the situation indicate that the very coordinating board which is strengthening its hold on West Texas State would probably stand in the way of allowing affiliation.

The coordinating board is on a negative jag of late, holding up new programs and degrees for further study, vowing to hold the line on higher education spending, cutting back off-campus offerings.

It is doubtful the board would be receptive to a move to join WTSU with a major university system.

It's questionable, too, whether a major university system would want to undertake the burdens of another campus. But because the desire by university systems to continue expansion can be defined only in terms of power, the motivation for such things is virtually inexplicable and anything could happen.

Cleland's idea is not one to be dismissed lightly. Neither is it one without built-in problems.

Sales tax would aid schools

Rep. Tom Massey's special House Committee on Alternatives to Financing Public Education, which meets in Canyon Monday for a public hearing, isn't likely to hear any startling new proposals for tax reform in the state.

There are, after all, only a finite number of ways to squeeze blood from a turnip.

But, there is one proposal in particular we hope Massey and his committee can manage to place in top priority position as they begin writing their report on alternatives later this year.

It is that school districts' residents be allowed to vote on whether to levy a 1 per cent sales tax for use in financing the local portion of the whole school operating bill.

Texas' cities already have the option of putting before their voters the referendum issue and many, including the City of Canyon, have chosen the sales tax as a lucrative alternative to the much-abused, now inadequate and unfair ad valorem tax. To Canyon, the 1 per cent sales tax has meant an additional $100,000 in revenue per year.

It would mean at least that much to the Canyon School District, which because of a re-arrangement of the formulas used to figure state and local shares for funding has been strapped with an unusually burdensome share to raise only through ad valorem taxation. An influx of $100,000 into CISD coffers next year would significantly reduce what local school officials say could amount to a 20 per cent ad valorem tax hike.

A sales tax has some inherent advantages as an income-producer. It seems to work more equitably in tapping those who can afford to pay higher taxes than does the ad valorem tax. It also allows the governmental entities to reap some additional harvests from tourists and other passers-through.

Establishment of a 1 per cent sales tax for school districts in the state would, superficially, seem to require no additional great state bureaucracy since Comptroller Bob Bullock's office is already computerized to handle the city sales tax collection system.

In fact, the state has long ago seen the hand-writing on the wall concerning ad valorem taxation and is striving to remove itself from that taxing alternative. The sales tax now provides the state treasury with large amounts of money.

Our message to Tom Massey and his House committee members: If we must take our medicine, we should at least be able to have one which goes down with a minimum of nausea. — C.W.

Honesty still best policy

By ANN BROWN

The only way any institution from the family to the federal government can function successfully is to be honest.

What toppled the Nixon administration? Deception.

What is the most common complaint given by the plaintiff in a divorce action? "I've been cheated."

One does not have to be a Bible scholar to know right from wrong — but it surely helps.

President Woodrow Wilson said, "Give the Bible back to the people unadulterated — unaltered, and unexplained — then see it work for the whole nation."

Our laws forbid Bible reading in public schools — but it is encouraged in jail cells.

Ignorance of the law does not excuse anyone for breaking civil laws; nature makes no allowance for it either.

All civil law is based on the Ten Commandments. Any society that despises law cannot expect to endure.

When a policeman risks his life to put a criminal behind bars, and he is back on the street before the officer finishes his paper work, is the court being honest with society or its servants?

According to the FBI bulletin, around 125 officers are slain by felons every year in America. All the officers slain in Western Europe, England, and Japan combined do not equal our grisly total.

Then there are more than 12,000 civilians murdered every year.

The Bible gives specific instructions for the control of crime. Our coins say "In God We Trust," but the laws of our land prove we do nothing of the kind.

Moses' law demanded thieves return stolen goods — and pay 20 per cent of their value to the victim for compensation (Lev. 6:4-5).

He also said murderers should be put to death (Gen. 9:6).

Judges and jurors who claim the Golden Rule forbids their punishing felons because they would not want to be punished have forgotten two important facts: They took oath to uphold the law, and the Golden Rule was given to obedient Christians. The assumption was that BOTH parties wanted to do right.

The felon who takes up the sword against his fellows has placed himself in the group condemned to die by the sword (Matt. 26:52).

People who make violence a way of life can seldom be controlled except by violent means. It's about as easy to restrain a hardened criminal with kindness as it is to put out a raging fire with a fan.

The philosophy that "there is no such thing as a bad boy" makes God a liar (Luke 6:45), and is contrary to the practical experience of every adult who has ever worked with children.

Only God can change bad boys into good ones, but He usually does it through human hands applying His rules.

God's rules work.

If the people who make the rules had to cope with the consequences, many rules would be changed.

The authorities who return criminals to the streets do not have to risk their lives to lock them up again.

Lawmakers who support busing, send their own children to private schools.

People who picket and boycott for cheap food do not slave in the fields to produce it.

Individuals or institutions that demand more than they are willing to give in return are dishonest.

Dishonesty leads to disillusion and dissolution.

Only by being honest can we be free.

Reader hits Zortman

Dear Mr. Wilson:

Last night (May 20) on KVII-TV's 10:00 p.m. "Pro News," Mr. Bill Tell Zortman, the station's news director read an introduction to a tragic story about a young man who attempted to immolate himself and was saved from a tragic and fiery death by quick-thinking bystanders. At the end of the news story, Mr. Zortman made the statement that "... some people will do anything for publicity."

Either Mr. Zortman paid no attention to the substance of the story or he has a crass disregard for the frailty of the mind. It was clear to me that the man who doused himself with gasoline and then set himself afire was mentally disturbed. The reporter who did the story took pains to point out that the man had been discharged from the Marine Corps because he had undergone psychiatric treatment. Yet, Mr. Zortman felt called upon to view the incident as a publicity stunt. I submit it was quite the opposite: a desperate cry for help that too few of us hear too late.

Mr. Zortman is the professional heir of Mr. Jim Pratt. Mr. Zortman was carefully groomed for the position he now holds by Mr. Pratt, but it seems that some of the tutelage didn't take. I feel sure that Jim Pratt would have never condoned such an ill-advised, cynical remark. It leads me to wonder why an otherwise adept management team continues to support Mr. Zortman. One with his attitudes would have been very much at home scoffing at those who populated Elizabethan England's Bedlams. His view of mental illness has no place in the Twentieth Century.

Perhaps this is one of the reasons mental illness is still something to be spoken about in whispers. Perhaps Mr. Zortman's nightly appearance on "Pro News" is further proof that "... some people will do anything for publicity."

Please withhold my name.

Dear Carroll:

On behalf of the Bicentennial Festival Committee, I would like to thank the Canyon News for the excellent coverage of our Windows to the Past display. There were valuable corrections and additions to Grace Warwick's "The Randall County Story" in last Thursday's edition.

We feel you've performed a great service to the community.

Shucking the guilt for awhile

If the sociologists, those cultivators of corporate guilt, have been right all these years in their assertions that society must bear the burden of guilt for the actions of each aberrant citizen, the reverse of their testimony should give us greater cause than usual each year about this time for joy.

High school and college graduation is typically a time to focus on the efforts of each individual. And congratulations are certainly in order for those students who, whether through innate ability or perseverance, have had another maturity ticket punched.

This thought is thrust home no more forcefully than during Canyon High School's annual Awards Night presentations. The one Thursday night was no different from those in the past, focusing on the individual and praiseworthy achievements of those who in another week will leave high school behind.

But, to reverse the theory of social and corporate guilt, each high school graduation should also emphasize the fact that, really, quite a large number of parents in quite a large number of cities and towns across the face of the nation have done quite a good job raising their kids.

So great has the tendency become to flagellate ourselves for each social mutant and misfit, it is almost surprising to see an honest-to-goodness good kid.

Canyon has lots of them. Which means Canyon, as a social environment, really isn't so bad. And which means Canyon's parents likewise, haven't done so bad.

We're proud of Canyon's graduating seniors, sure, but the whole of Canyon deserves a pat on the back, too. — C.W.

Bicentennial echoes from the past

(This history was compiled by the Pierce family. They participated in the "Windows of the Past" festival last weekend, but their story was too late for the historical edition of the paper that week. So here is their family history).

Pierce Family 1886-1976

Mr. Pierce was born in Troy, Tennessee on December 31, 1866. He came to Randall County in 1880 and purchased ranch land in the northwest part of the county. He liked it so well here that he wrote his family in Tennessee and was instrumental in his brother, Jessie Pierce, and his sister, Mrs. C.A. Hitchcock and family moving here and homesteading land in the general area of the land he occupied. Mr. Pierce worked his land alone for some ten years. Then he returned to Obion Co., Tennessee where he married Mary Fannie Miles on October 21, 1900 and brought her back to the ranch with him. They continued to live on the ranch for sometime. Two of the children, Minnie Pearl and Lexie, attended school at the Hoffman School for a year or two before Mr. Pierce bought a house two blocks west of the Old Canyon High School, located on the site of the Canyon Junior High now. Mrs. Pierce and the children lived in town in the winter where the children attended school and in the summer they returned to the ranch to help with the summer work. This continued until the ranch was sold in 1929.

Mr. Pierce served as a trustee of the Hoffman School which existed until 1914. Before Mr.

Pierce sold his ranch he donated three acres of land for the erection of a school house. The school was built in 1927-28 about a mile from the site of the Hoffman School and was named for its benefactor. When Mr. Pierce gave the three acres for the school building it was stipulated that if it was not used for a school building it was to be returned to the Pierce estate. In 1948, the Pierce school consolidated with the Canyon Independent School district and the land was returned to the Pierce's. Mrs. Pierce sold it in 1960 to Morton Baker, who owned the adjoining property.

In 1935 Mr. Pierce sold the home in the west part of Canyon and moved to 1308 7th Ave. The home at this address still belongs to the Pierce heirs and is occupied by the eldest son, Lexie A. Pierce.

Mr. and Mrs. Pierce had five children one of which died in infancy.

Their eldest, a daughter, Minnie Pearl, graduated from Canyon High School and attended West Texas Normal College. After graduation from college she taught school a year at Happy, Texas then went to Sonoita, Arizona to teach. It was here that she met her husband, Ed LeGendre, who owned and operated the General Mercantile store there. They were married on June 4, 1924. Mr. LeGendre passed away in 1963 and Mrs. LeGendre in 1975. They left two sons.

Hubert Pierce of Glendale, Arizona. He works as an engineer for the City of Phoenix. Edward Phillip Jr. is employed as Executive of Western American Mortgage Bank and his wife, Mary Ellen, teaches first gride in Glendale, Arizona where they make their home. They have three children, Randi Sue of Tempe, Arizona, Edward Phillip III and his wife Linda live in Tucson, Arizona with their two children, Jonnie Ann and Aaron Baxter; and John Farrell of Phoenix, Arizona.

Lexie A. graduated from Canyon High School and went to Phoenix, Arizona to work but returned to Amarillo in 1927 and went to work at the Post Office. In 1933 he transferred to St. Louis, Missouri where he met and married Lola Bryant Feeler. He continued working for the Post Office department until his retirement in 1958. At that time they moved to Wellington, Kansas and then to Canyon in 1959. His wife passed away in September 1959 and he continued living with his mother, Mrs. L.A. Pierce, at 1308 7th Avenue until her death in 1965. He still resides at this address. He has one son, Donald, who is married and lives at Goddard, Kansas. Donald has three daughters, Cathy, married to Ron Cripe, lives in Atlanta, Georgia; Kay, who is attending school in New Britain, Conn.; and Donna, still living at home.

Felix, the third child, lives here in Canyon. He married Tommie Rushing of Floydada in 1928. They have one daughter, Alice, who resides in Phoenix, Arizona with her husband, Hoyt Kenmore, who is the State Supervisor of Industrial Arts, Arizona Education Department. They have three children: Neal and Nina, who live at home, and Alicia, who lives with her husband, Nick Blasingame. Nick is vice president of Construction Supply Co. in Farmington, New three months, locking no doors, and when he came back everything would be just as he left it. It is extremely risky to leave a house unlocked now for any length of time. "In those days, everybody was honest," exclaimed Mr. Pierce and this honesty was what enabled the pioneers, including Mr. Pierce, to build Randall County to the progressive community it is today. It is this inherent quality which Mr. Pierce would have liked to pass on to the future generations, but he was disappointed that all people did not inherit this outstanding characteristic of the pioneers.

Engaging in farming and ranching business, Mr. Pierce did not hold many public offices, but he was Vice President of the First National Bank. He stood behind those who did and helped them to build the county. He was always ready and willing to lend a hand in the construction of all community enterprises. In being a member of the local Methodist Church, he was one of the builders of Canyon Churches.

Mr. L.A. Pierce died in 1951 and Mrs. Fannie Pierce in 1965.

City begins spraying for mosquito raids

City crews began spraying Friday as the first crop of summer mosquitoes appeared this week. The misting with malathion solution will continue for several days until the entire city has been sprayed, city manager Glen Metcalf said.

Additional spraying will be influenced by the weather. Mosquitoes best hatch following a rain, he said, so later misting will be done after summer showers.

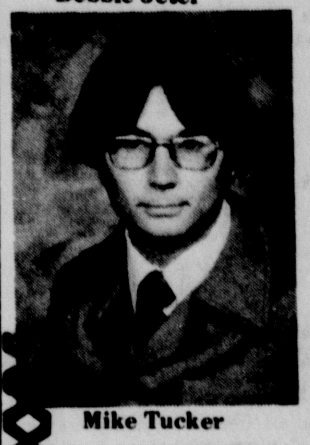

Residents can help control mosquitoes, Metcalf said, by spraying any standing water or moist humid areas in their yard with a malathion solution.

The city will pay extra attention to the ball diamonds in both Southeast Park and near the elementary school, he said, to protect players and spectators.

He said the creeks that surround Canyon are the primary breeding grounds for mosqui-

Dessie Taylor's funeral is held

Funeral services for Dessie Graves Taylor, 73, were conducted Saturday afternoon at Schooler-Gordon Funeral Chapel in Canyon with Rev. Hubert Thomson, retired minister, officiating.

Mrs. Taylor was born January 11, 1903 at Texola, Oklahoma and was educated in Texola and Canyon Public Schools. She married Roy Taylor in 1926 at Canyon. He preceded her in death during 1955.

Previous to retirement she was employed with the University of New Mexico Doctor's Hospital in Albuquerque, New Mexico and moved to Marshall, Texas in 1974 to be near her daughter. She died at Marshall, Texas on Wednesday.

Survivors include the daughter, Mrs. James D. Bost of Marshall; a son, George W. Taylor of Albuquerque, New Mexico; two brothers, Leland Graves of Canyon and Tommy Graves of Amarillo; and four grandchildren.

Local arrangements were handled by Schooler-Gordon Funeral Directors with burial being held at Dreamland Cemetery. Serving as pallbearers were Jack Taylor, Wilford Taylor, Jr., Wilford Taylor, III, Ferrell Abbott, Clifford Abbott and Tom Platt.

toes. Crews will spray as close to the creeks as possible.

In addition to the discomfort of mosquito bites, there is some risk of disease from the insects, said Dr. Edwin J. Low, city health officer.

"Most cases don't have any effect other than the sore on the skin," he said. "But the mosquitoes we have here are capable of transferring encephalitis from either birds or horses."

Several cases of such encephalitis were seen here in the '60s, he said, although most of the patients lived in the South Plains area. And the cases usually occurred in August and September.

"There is always the danger when a person is bitten by a mosquito that the insect has previously bitten a chicken or bird or horse and has picked up encephalitis," he said.

Other mosquito-borne diseases such as malaria and yellow fever are not found in this country.

do it." But, Lindsey echoed, the hang-up is finding the right man for the job. Griffin also believes an in-house program for re-appraisal would be the best option. But, he thinks commissioners may be kidding themselves if they think an in-house operation won't cost money.

The way Griffin figures it right now, an in-house re-appraisal could cost as much as $175,000, with 10 to 12 persons on the payroll for a year to complete the survey.

Money may be the key problem in determining whether to go in-house or outside for the re-appraisal, but it will apparently be a problem even if the commissioners decide on a minimum in-house program.

No funds have been included in the 1977 proposed county budget for the re-appraisal effort and Pond projects a surplus of only about $75,000 if taxes are not increased for the upcoming year. Commissioners budgeted nearly $50,000 for the re-appraisal during 1976.

Commissioners hiked taxes by about 30 per cent to meet the 1976 budget and Pond has said he hopes they can hold the line on taxes for the next year.

Where will the funds for a re-evaluation come from, whether for the $350,000 package or for an in-house effort?

Commissioners and the Judge don't know. "I don't know how it will be done," Pond said. "I hope some of the people on the court will come up with some ideas."

But, the commissioners are just as stumped. "Everybody," Fulgenzi said, "wants to do it, but nobody knows how."

One alternative approached by commissioners has been the possibility of being joined by the Canyon Independent School District and the City of Canyon and City of Amarillo in the effort.

Griffin said he has talked with Canyon Schools Supt. Jerry Jacobs about that possibility and has not been given much encouragement.

"They may be seriously considering it but nothing has been said to me which would make me think they are considering it," he said.

Jacobs last month said the school and city tax rolls are fairly up-to-date.

Griffin said Commissioner Jim Fletcher, who was not reached for comments last week, was to discuss the possibility of a joint effort with Amarillo.

"It would be a solution if we could work this thing together," he said, "but we can't stand by and wait."

Gas. . .

gas supply on its West Texas system and at the public hearing, Pioneer will present detailed testimony on each of the contracts and on the methods, techniques, policies and practices in obtaining gas. Mills said.

The petition to the Railroad Commission asks that all of these gas acquisition activities be reviewed for the purpose of establishing the correct amount of Pioneer's current cost of gas at the time of the review; commenting on and determining the appropriateness of the manner, policies, practices, procedures, methods and techniques which Pioneer has employed in and should employ in maintaining its gas supply.

In the past city commissions in Hereford and Canyon have indicated concern over the practice of Pioneer in passing through to customers 100 per cent of the cost increase the company pays to purchase gas in the field.

Hereford has fought for an 85 per cent pass-through, contending the 100 per cent pass-through releases Pioneer from any motivation to cut costs in acquiring new gas.

Metcalf has said the Canyon commissioners were watching closely the Hereford battle before determining whether to enter the fray.

Lose. . .

the fight began that the hail suppression activities on the South Plains adversely limit rainfall in the area.

The water development board issued the permits after receiving a report from Royston Lanning, board counsel and adjudicatory hearing officer for a public hearing held earlier this year in Plainview.

Lanning said last week he made no recommendation to the board on whether or not the permits should be issued. But, he said had he been asked his opinion he would have recommended issuance of the permits.

Lanning said the two groups were not eligible to receive full four-year permits under Texas law because their weather modification efforts are not continuous operations.

The groups will have to seek new permits next spring if they plan to continue their cloud-seeding programs in 1977.

Henson said a meeting of the farmer-rancher opposition group will be called in the near future to go over the board's decision.

"We will be fighting them next year," he vowed.

Henson and Rancher Walter Graham have headed the year-long effort to deny permits to the South Plains weather changers.

They forced two public hearings this spring in area towns for testimony on the proposals, and forced the adjudicatory hearing in Plainview.

They have argued that the South Plains cloud-seeders have worked to reduce rainfall in more northern counties by breaking up newly formed rainclouds in an effort to suppress hail.

Tax. . .

brought about by these public hearings indicates that many people agree with him," Massey said.

"The local share of school funding has been increasing, and the local share is dependent totally on the tax on real property. Education costs are higher, because of inflation, necessary salary increases, and additional programs, so the pressure has really been on local districts to increase their ad valorem levies. This is putting a squeeze on our land owners, home owners, and businesses, who are shouldering the burden of education costs that should be shared by those possessing other forms of wealth," he added.

"We in the Legislature are working hard to hold government spending to reasonable levels. But these hearings are bringing out that the slogan of 'no new taxes' has come to be a sore point with some folks who tell us that while they're not paying more taxes to the State, there's a lot more coming out of their pockets at the local level, to the city and the school district," Massey said.

"We can't close our eyes to the plight of these people. We may very well, at some point, want to look toward increasing the state's share of funding for our public schools. But to accomplish any sort of relief for the property owner, we must look to increased revenue from some other source - and this is the realm of the Special Committee. We have received many suggestions for alternative revenue sources, and there will no doubt be more forthcoming during the rest of these public hearings. It will be our responsibility to look at each in terms of dollars and cents, and make appropriate recommendations to the 65th Legislature, which convenes next January.

"I am pleased that the committee has decided to locate one of its public hearings in the Panhandle, and I hope that all persons interested in this matter will take this opportunity to express their views to the members of the Legislature," Massey said.

Hatcher Brown has been with WT since 1915

Few people can claim to have spent almost their entire lives associated with the company from which they're retiring. That claim can be legitimately made by Hatcher Brown of Canyon. "Hatch" is retiring this summer from West Texas State University's health and physical education faculty. He's been with the University's School of Education since 1960, but his affiliation with WTSU goes much further back than that.

His first encounter with the Canyon campus was when he and his parents moved there from Roanoke, Virginia in 1915, ten years after the school opened. In that year, he entered the first grade in what was then West Texas State Normal College's experimental school.

He spent the next sixteen years working his way through the grade school, high school and college. Equipped with a bachelor of science degree, he took his first public school coaching job at Happy, where he stayed until 1934.

Hatcher Brown remembers being surprised at some of the first teaching challenges he faced. He had just completed his student

"I didn't believe the first public school experience that I had because the kids just didn't act the way I thought they would act."

One indicator of the new world Hatcher Brown was in was the reaction he got from one of the first tests he gave:

"I'd never paid much attention to the kids on a test during my practice teaching," he recalls, "so I sat down at the front of the room and did something else and in a minute I looked up and I could see notes all over the class. I could see books open. This hadn't happened to me before." There were some baffling paperwork details that Hatcher had never heard of before. He recalls one incident with a document called a daily register. In his first encounter with it, he made some mistakes that drew the school superintendent's attention.

"The superintendent told me: 'You've lost eleven children,'" Brown remembers. He mastered the mysteries of daily registers, giving tests and coaching football teams in public schools for the next six years. During that time, he served on the faculties of Denver City and Tulia High Schools.

From 1945 to 1948, he was on the faculty of West Texas State Teacher's College's high school and then joined the coaching staff of football coach Frank Kimbrough. After serving under Kimbrough and coach Clark Jarnigan in the fifties, he joined the PE faculty.

Some of his fondest memories of West Texas State are tied to his football years. Two of those highlights are the teams he helped coach to a Sun Bowl and Tangerine Bowl championships. As a student, he was a member of several state championship basketball teams.

During the years on the PE faculty, Brown has spent part of each semester evaluating the progress of student teachers assigned to various public school classrooms around the Panhandle. As far as he is concerned, there's a marked difference in them and the challenges they face compared to his early teaching days.

"One thing that has been changed is the attitude toward dress code and this type of thing," he observes. "You could tell kids how to dress, how to look; no more. We can't do it now and that's all there is to it."

Brown says another area that has changed is in homework. "At one time," he says, "we could assign all kinds of homework. It came back. Now, your principal will come around and say: 'lay off the homework. We just don't have time for homework.'"

A plaque Hatcher Brown was presented by a group of students last year pretty well sums up what the eleven students he lost (and found again) and thousands of others have felt about him: "For confidence and faith; for understanding of his students."

teaching in some of the very classrooms he had sat in as an experimental school student.

"At the time I did my student teaching," he recalls, "we had one hour's observation for a full semester in the class we were going to teach. Then, when we actually did our student teaching, we did one hour a day under very close supervision in an experimental training school situation. As a result, there were very few discipline problems; in fact, we just didn't have any."

Moving out of that near-clinical atmosphere to the real world of Happy's public schools was an eye-opener for the brand new and eager teacher Hatcher Brown.

"I wasn't ready at all," he says.

Student's article published

West Texas State University undergraduate student Eddie Kiser of Canyon has published an article in a Southern Methodist University publication, "An Archeological Inventory of Brantley Reservoir, New Mexico."

Kiser's article examines the history of Seven Rivers, New Mexico, a ghost town which once flourished from 1869-1920.

Kiser became interested in the town when he was part of the SMU surveying team which examined the reservoir area.

Although he had not seen the town, he prepared himself for the survey trip by reading about the town and compiling a bibliography.

His interest did not stop after the survey, and he continued his research by conducting personal interviews in the neighboring towns of Artesia and Carlsbad. All that was left of Seven Rivers was the cemetery.

Mark Henderson, who headed the SMU project, heard about Kiser's research and requested that he write a history of the town.

After nine months of intensive research through local, county and state documents, Kiser completed his "very brief, outline history," which was published this May.

"Probably the most significant thing about the town was its direct involvement with the Lincoln County war, which was a fight between the big and small ranchers in the area," Kiser said. "About 70 percent of the population died in the late 1840s as a result of the war."

The battle centered around the famous cattleman John Chisum, a large rancher who controlled cattle sales and who hired professional gunmen such as Billy the Kid to quell the complaints of the smaller cattlemen in Seven Rivers.

The war ended in 1879, and new settlers arrived by wagon train in 1880. The rest of the story is like many others in the Plains region — the railroad passed it by, the water ran out, and the settlers left by 1920, leaving a scanty trail laboriously tracked by Kiser.

Parks board votes funds for water

The city parks and recreation board voted Friday to spend part of the money received from the recent sale of city property on extending water to the developing Southeast Park.

It will cost an estimated $8,000 to put a six-inch line to the planned location of the ball diamonds. The board was given $13,100 from the sale.

The board also made tentative decisions on the location within the park of the planned facilities to give to the artist for the scale drawing being prepared. The new plan is very similar to the park planned several years ago by a Chamber of Commerce committee.

"If we could go out and stake this parking lot and playground and plow up this part and plant grass, then we could get these clubs and people started planting and we could have something there this summer," said board member Phillip Langen.

It's not just another old car to restorer

Craig Howard, 17 year old junior at Canyon High School, has some "new wheels" to get around town, and the mechanic who restored the "wheels" has a lot of memories stored up about the automobile from its earlier days.

"I've rebuilt fifty or more motors besides giving many an operation on old cars found in storage and out in pastures since I joined the Model A Club some nine years ago," stated R.E. Marshall of Marshall Auto Shop in downtown Canyon.

"This one though," he stated, "has been around the community about thirty five years and the farmer who ran it got some good use from it. He ran it until all the fenders had broken and been welded.

"It was originally a five window Model A coupe and had its deck or turtle shell chopped out and refitted with an old Model T truck bed. The top had been fixed with sheet iron and bolts which were three inches too long, with nuts and washers used to take up the extra space," stated Marshall.

Formerly owned by longtime Canyon-Randall County resident, Ross Craig, the automobile is now owned by his grandson, Craig Howard, who is the son of Duane and Betty Ross Howard of Canyon.

Craig has decided to use the vehicle as a special interest car and since it had been pasture bound for more than 25 years it took some doing just to get it into town for repairs. Craig and his friend found four wheels and tires to get the Model A to Marshall's Auto Shop for repairs.

Marshall, who has repaired numerous motors and restored several vintage automobiles during his career, found numerous problems in the process of restoring Craig's Model A to a running condition.

"First off," said Marshall, "someone had stripped it of the carburetor, coil and other parts like the instrument panel and all of the wiring for lights. The motor was not frozen so we put a high tension mag on it and got a carburetor from Lee Roy

"Put some gas in it and the starter and generator were so full of dirt that they were frozen dead. After we got all of that working again I put in a new battery and a lot of lube oil in the spark plugs — fired it up — and the old car blew out dirt doobers and bird's nests from the exhaust for a good five minutes, while hitting on all four cylinders.

"We couldn't get the drain plug out so had to take off the oil pan to remove the plug and there was a good three inches of muck in the pan. Cleaned the pan out, installed new gaskets and 30 weight oil and the motor ran like a top — ready for a trial run.

"On that trial run, we found that the clutch was very rough but thought that would improve with use, and then it began slipping. That's when I noticed a hole about the size of a silver dollar in the top of the clutch housing which has been filled with cotton by the field mice. The cotton had gotten mixed up in the clutch and we really had a mess to clear up.

"We took out the transmission and put in another clutch. And the transmission would slip out of high gear every ten feet — so we rebuilt the transmission, restored the clutch, and then found that the motor would run out gas about every mile. After blowing out the gas line it would go again for another mile — then chug down — and there didn't seem to be any rust in the gas line either.

"With a strong light I took a peek into the gas tank and of all things found that someone had dropped a piece of wood into the gas tank that would jiggle over the gas outlet and clog the tank screen — you know we have gotten away from measuring the gasoline with a stick in recent years," he laughed.

Marshall, who has been in the automobile repair business for thirty three years, concluded that Craig's Model A was one of the roughest rebuilding jobs he has had in years.

Sorghum Enemy #1

Now there's biological protection against sorghum's No. 1 enemy — Greenbugs. Genetic greenbug resistance is bred into 6 high producing grain sorghum hybrids.

3 Big Reasons You'll Want NK Hybrids With Greenbug Resistance

Yield

Excellent grain yields produced from 2-1/2 million acres of NK hybrids with greenbug resistance over the last four years.

Spraying may be necessary under severe greenbug investment.*

Control*

Even if greenbug populations build up on hybrids with resistance, the hybrids do not show the yield loss associated with non-tolerant hybrids.

Economy

Seedling-to-harvest protection reduces the need for frequent chemical applications.

SIX HYBRIDS WITH GREENBUG RESISTANCE GOING STRONG

Bond issue election information given

What it's all about

Tuesday's bond issue ballot proposal would call for issuance of $2,950,000 in bonds to finance construction of a new 600-student elementary school at a site designated last week by the school board, and remodeling and renovation of Canyon High School facilities.

The following information provides a break-down of estimates costs, figures which board members have rounded off to come to the $2.9 million figure on Tuesday's ballot. The information also indicates those parts of Canyon High which would be involved in remodeling or expansion.

The map indicates the location of a 12-acre site which the district has an option to purchase. The site is located on Sundown Lane about 1000 feet west of the lane intersection with Western Street. The site is about 1.2 miles from Gene Howe School as the crow flies and about 1.8 miles from the school by road. It is diagonally located on the same section as the proposed site for future junior high or high school facilities. The site was purchased for about $30,000 and water and sewer extensions are expected to cost about $90,000.

WTSU coed's father made famous by photograph in texts, books

It's not every student who can expect to see photographs of her father in class textbooks and national exhibits.

But Laurie Coble, a Texas State University freshman from Dalhart, is used to it. The only problem is "No one believes me," she says.

The persistent photograph is one of the most famous Depression pictures ever taken. The picture taken in Oklahoma in 1936, shows a rugged farmer, Laurie's grandfather Arthur Coble, and his two sons Milton and Darrel seeking shelter in a half-buried barn from the dust-filled sky.

"It seems such a vivid shot of the twin disasters of depression and drought and the human suffering involved," says Dr. Peter Petersen, associate professor of history at West Texas State.

Taken by the famous photographer Arthur Rothstein, the picture is part of the series commissioned by the Farm Security Administration during the 1930s.

"The FSA hired photographers to record the effect of drought and depression on the land, and as a result we have a fantastic visual record of rural America in the period of 1935-1942," Petersen notes.

The picture's vividness created such an impact that Look Magazine sent Rothstein back to the Coble farm in Cimarron County, Okla. in 1961 to retake the same location — only this time it was lush and green.

The photograph also appears in the WT history textbook, "From the Beginnings: A Survey of American History," and numerous other textbooks and exhibits.

The Coble shot will be part of the Farm Security Administration photograph exhibit at the Amarillo Art Center, which has invited Laurie and her mother Martha to the opening on June 9.

While Laurie and her mother can recall little about what Milton said about the depression, they vividly remember Rothstein's return trip in 1961.

"He was just like anybody else," Mrs. Coble recalls. "You felt like you had known him."

Laurie is the daughter of Mrs. Martha Coble of 1104 Peach, Dalhart.

Laurie Coble

Another student survey set this summer to hear frosh

West Texas State University will make another survey of incoming students this summer to attempt to determine why they have chosen the Canyon institution for higher education.

H. Wayne Hughes of the WTSU broadcast bureau said the new information office is conducting the survey during freshman orientation sessions this summer to determine the motivation of students who have chosen WTSU.

The survey will come close on the heels of a survey taken by a WTSU graduate business student this past semester dealing with motivation of high school seniors in determining which college to attend.

That survey of AAAA high school graduating seniors indicated the factor which dealt most heavily in college selection for the students was program offerings of the university.

Hughes said the new office surveys will be given each of 700 entering freshman who come to the five pre-enrollment orientation sessions this summer on campus.

The students will be asked to check which of 14 possible factors provided the motivation for their selection of WTSU.

The factors include influence of parents, friends, counselors, the majors available, contact with university representatives, news articles, campus tours, radio or TV advertisements or contact with university faculty.

Hughes said the survey results will be used in his office to help determine the best approaches for future publicity and news releases to recruit students.

FOLKS WITH NEWS-PAPER headlines of national and international events occurring since World War II have been asked to contact Claire Kuehn, archivist-librarian, at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum, 655-2567, extension 5. Mrs. Kuehn is preparing a special exhibit using news headlines from the past to be displayed at the museum soon. Some of the work on the display is already underway.

THREE SESSIONS OF the summer recreation program are being sponsored jointly by the City of Canyon and West Texas State University. Registration was held Saturday morning at the Activities Center and classes will include swimming, golf, twirling, cheerleading, arts and crafts, tumbling and trampoline, archery, bowling, tennis, junior Olympics, softball and adult fitness.

The program is not only for children but will also include adults and for the nominal fee it's a good deal for locals who like to keep fit. If you missed the Saturday registration time, contact A.J. Luquette, Physical Education Department, West Texas State University, Canyon 79016 for further information on the overall program as applications and fees may also be handled by mail. The first session of the program begins June 1-11 with the total program winding up July 9.

AFTER THE TREMENDOUS success of last week-end's "Windows To The Past" festival in downtown Canyon, local folks are beginning to make ready for the summer bicentennial celebration to be held July 3.

Jane Stephens is general chairman for the upcoming community celebration and some concrete plans have already been established for that event.

Stone funeral held Friday

Funeral services for John Obad Stone, 77, who moved to Canyon in January 1976 from Paris, Texas, were conducted at the First United Methodist Church of Childress on Friday with Rev. James Price officiating.

Mr. Stone, who resided at 514 12th Avenue, died Wednesday at Palo Duro Hospital in Canyon. He was born October 15, 1898 at Sulphur Bluff, Texas.

He was a retired carpenter and former motel operator at Lake Texoma until 1967. The Stones moved here from Paris, Texas in January.

He was a member of First United Methodist Church in Childress. Local funeral arrangements were handled by laying around that need a good place to help out — think about contributing toward two worthwhile projects currently underway to purchase new lifesaving equipment at Palo Duro Hospital.

The Heritage Woman's Club has paid off better than $1,000 on the portapak defibrillator unit purchased last club year for the hospital's use. The club women would like an assist from individuals and other clubs who would like to help raise the additional $1,500 to put the project in the black.

Another new heart monitoring system, costing in the range of $25,000, is currently being sought for the hospital by the membership of the Palo Duro Hospital Auxiliary. They kicked off the fund-raising by presenting $500 of their proceeds from the hospital gift shop toward the ultimate purchase.

So if you have some extra money to be used for a worthwhile project — make your wishes known to either organization soon. Mrs. O.W. (Bud) Parker (655-3117) is in charge of the Hospital Auxiliary which has opened a Heart Monitor account at both city banks; and Mrs. George (Janie) Loudder (655-4042) is the newly elected president for Heritage Woman's Club which has the defibrillator project.

THE GENE HOWE School sixth graders will present their annual band and choral concert on May 25 at 7 p.m.

GIFT — Fifth graders at Rex Reeves, who bought and planted the honey locust trees on the school yard, dedicated the trees Thursday and presented a plaque they had made to Bob Parks, Rex Reeves principal. Showing off the plaque is Greg Hudgins, Scott Robinson, Allison Pride, Newt Harrell, Randy Bigelow and April McRoberts.

Heritage Woman's Club presented a $410 check to Ray Grimes, hospital administrator for Palo Duro Hospital, this week as an installment of the portapack defibrillator unit purchased last year as a club project. Making the presentation were Darlene Plank, 1975-76 club president, and Darlene Hollabaugh. Other clubs and individuals may contribute toward the final $1,500 owed for the defibrillator unit to monitor heart patients at the hospital.

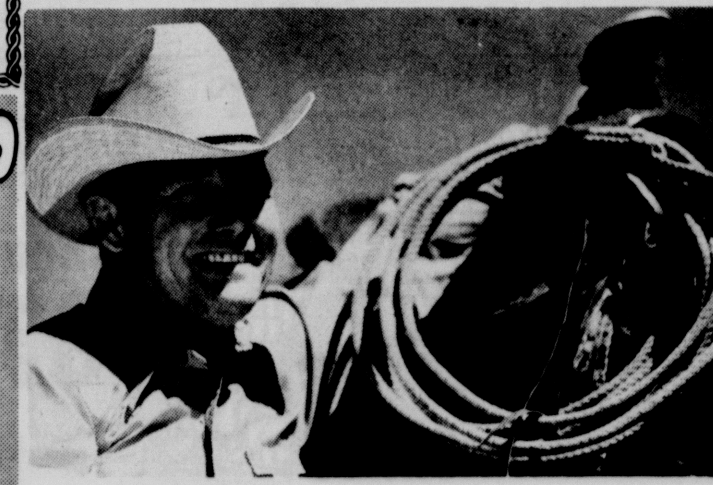

Artist Ward in Philly for one-of-a-kind show

Canyon Cowboy Artist Jim Ward, who is president of the Texas Cowboy Artists Association, left last week for a one-of-a-kind display of the association membership's artworks in Philadelphia.

Ward was accompanied by Kenneth Wyatt of Tulsa and two artists from downstate to the art exhibit which is being held this weekend in conjunction with a Salute to Texas for the bicentennial festivities in Philadelphia. Ward sent six paintings and four bronze pieces to the show, which was to have been preceded by a reception.

The association's exhibit is the only art exhibit from any state during Philadelphia's Salute to the States which began April 1 and is to continue through Nov. 1.

2 from CHS to compete

Two Canyon High School students will compete in the state high school rodeo finals June 15 through 19 in Hallettsville.

To qualify for the finals, Ronnie Howell placed fourth in tiedown calf roping and Vickie Runyan won second place in break away roping at the Regional Rodeo recently hosted by the West Texas State University Rodeo Club.

The two will compete with winners from seven other regions of the state.

Representatives from regional high schools participated in bull riding, steer wrestling, bareback bronc riding, saddle bronc riding, tiedown calf roping, cutting horse contests, cloverleaf barrel race, pole bending race and goat tying.

This is the first year regional qualifying rodeos have been held prior to the state rodeo, according to Dr. Charles Smallwood, WTSU dean of agriculture.

Pond endorses school bond issue

County Judge Woody Pond, who serves as ex-officio county school superintendent, endorsed Thursday the upcoming Canyon School District $2.9 million bond issue.

Pond told members of the Randall County Board of School Trustees he plans to vote for the passage of the bond issue, the third attempt since late last year by the district to pass an issue for construction of new schools.

"If we'll think about the kids rather than the dollars we'll be a whole lot better off," Pond said. "I'm gonna vote for it, that's my personal feeling."

Pond characterized the current over-crowded situation in Canyon elementary schools as "unfair" to the students, teachers and taxpayers.

Pond's endorsement came unsolicited during a morning session of the county school board, which is not affiliated with the independent school district board.

Board members themselves made no comment about the upcoming bond issue election, scheduled for Tuesday at two area voting places.

But, one board member asked CISD Supt. Jerry Jacobs, who attended the meeting to present changes in next fall's school bus routes, why the land recently named as site for a proposed new elementary school carried a $27,000 price tag.

The CISD board announced Tuesday night they had obtained an option to purchase a 12-acre site at Sundown Lane and Western Street south of Amarillo.

"If you'll check with real estate people and if you'll see what land that's in the way of development is going for, this price is in line," Jacobs responded.

Board members also discussed with Jacobs possible alternatives for financing public school education in Texas, noting that Monday a special House committee will have hearings in Canyon to hear similar proposals.

Jacobs discussed briefly the levying of a special 1 per cent sales tax to increase revenues for school districts, the levying of an additional tax on luxuries and the tapping of intangibles such as bank accounts for tax funds.

Pond urged the board members to attend the Monday meeting.

Jacobs outlined for the board the recent guidelines reviewed by the CISD board with the Amarillo school board on future de-annexations of development property in the north part of the district.

He reiterated his concern that he had misunderstood the purpose of the pact, believing it was to serve as the only guideline for future de-annexation considerations. Jacobs had expressed doubts about the utility of the guidelines last Monday when both school boards sat down together to discuss them.

"I guess I interpreted it wrong because I thought we were trying to work out guidelines for future annexations and de-annexations," he said. "I got the impression as far as Amarillo is concerned this is not so . . ."

"I'm afraid I'm prejudiced, but so far what we've done is work out guidelines which might be acceptable, but we've gotten back to the same old game."

The county trustees, in other action, approved a new metes and bounds description of the Canyon school district, redrawn to show the recent de-annexation from CISD of a 320-acre tract of land owned by Quien Sabe Investment Co. of Amarillo.

Board Chairman R.R. Gist Jr. asked Jacobs to work up a report and recommendation on a formula for determining the pro rata share of bonded indebtedness owned by the AISD to the CISD as a result of the recent land transfer.

The board also approved the addition of one new bus route to the CISD bus system. The approval also covered the revision of eight existing routes.

Registration set May 31

Registration for the first summer term at West Texas State University will be May 31 from 9 a.m. until 2:20 p.m. in the WTSU Student Activities Center.

An orientation and advising session for beginning freshmen will be from 9 a.m. until noon in Room 101 of the University Complex South.

Class instruction begins June 1, the last day for paying fees without a $5 penalty.

Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum staff workers outlining plans for future auxiliary projects include from left, Bill Harrison, museum anthropologist; Patti Kilpatrick, educational director of the museum; Claire Kuehn, archivist-librarian; and Olive Bugbee, curator of art (on floor).

Auxiliary member, Peggy Smallwood, left, visits with the museum's fashion curator, Jackie Wilson, as the two spend afternoon hours together mending antique clothing for museum displays. Mrs. Smallwood is one of several museum auxiliary members who serve on the sewing committee.

Grace Knighton, left, and Jo Anderson often spend a part of their service hours with the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum Auxiliary tending the first floor gift shop where souvenir items are available to tourists and residents.

Volunteers help history unfold for visitors to local museum

The three-year-old Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum Auxiliary plays an integral role in the promotion and welfare advancement of the local museum and the people it serves throughout the year.

The auxiliary was originated by the University Study Club of Canyon on request from the museum several years ago. The auxiliary serves in many areas approved by the museum's director, Dr. James Hanson, and the executive board of the museum with work assignments under direction of museum staff members.

"History is a part of everyone's life and it's important that our past be presented in a proper atmosphere — especially for the training of young minds," notes Betty Morrison, president of the museum auxiliary.

As with most volunteer groups, the museum auxiliary is in constant need of additional men and women members to continually improve the museum's services for the visiting public. Prospective auxiliary members may contact Mrs. Morrison, 655-3510 for further information about membership. All volunteers are asked to state the preference of their workday weekly and the hours which they would prefer to give voluntary service.

Presently the auxiliary has slightly over two dozen active members who spend several hours weekly taking over chores as assigned by the museum's staff. Each auxiliary member, upon joining, is trained thoroughly under the guidance of a museum staff member to work in their preferred area.

Auxiliary dues are a nominal $2 per year and the auxiliary gets away from the confines of "meetings all the time" by individual members working only in their assigned area throughout the year. As a group the auxiliary meets for four general sessions each year, more for checking the progress of volunteer workers and meeting with the total museum staff than for any other reason. The auxiliary meets on the second Tuesday of June, September and January with the annual election-installation meeting held during April.

Current auxiliary president, Mrs. Gene W. Morrison, is joined by other officers including: Mrs. Charles Smallwood, first vice president and projects chairman; Mrs. Grace Knighton, second vice president and membership chairman; Mrs. Lois Hull, secretary; Mrs. Harold Erwin, treasurer; Mrs. Murphy White, parliamentarian; and Mrs. Crews Henry, historian.

The major role of museum auxiliary members is to participate in the area of the member's choice on a special auxiliary committee such as the tour and research committee which is responsible for conducting guided museum tours for schools, organizations and travel tour groups visiting the museum and to provide research materials giving information about museum tours.

The tour guides serve year-around in that capacity as they assist young and old in learning about their historical past with a tour of the local museum. Serving on the committee are Lois Hull, Barbara Sawvell, Zoe Henry, Betty Morrison, Thelma Ruth Childs, Lisa Kuhlman and Ruby Carter.

Other committee roles for auxiliary members include the souvenir shop where volunteer workers serve as salespersons in the gift shop. Both the tour and souvenir shop committees come under the direct leadership and guidance of paid museum staff worker, Patti Kilpatrick.

Selling souvenirs are committee members Joyce Wooten, Peggy Smallwood, Martha Goodman, Flossie Johnston, Jo Anderson, Grace Knighton and Hazel Walsh. The committee's workdays vary as sometimes there'll be a rather quiet museum atmosphere and other times there will be a shop filled with buyers and lookers.

Claire Kuehn, museum archivist-librarian, serves as an official museum representative to the auxiliary and also oversees the museum library committee's work. The library committee of the auxiliary does general cataloguing, filing of books, papers and other museum documents and also does some research on specific subjects. On that committee presently are Christine McGlasson and Virginia Allen.

Although not often called into service, the auxiliary has a committee assigned for display maintenance which is responsible for such duties as dusting museum items, repair of displays and which can be called into duty by staff members of the museum as needed.

The special projects committee of the auxiliary covers several areas in the proper functioning of the museum with the hostess group responsible to prepare for various artist receptions and other social functions at the museum.

Jackie Wilson, acting curator of costumes, oversees the restoration of museum fashion items by the committee assigned that special projects field.

The special projects committee from the auxiliary is composed presently of Peggy Smallwood, Peggy Jones, Betty Markham, Jo Carol Lindsey, Shirley White and Jan Henson.

Two auxiliary members, Billie Erwin and Bobby Henson, are presently doing home assignment work for the museum. The home assignments are cataloguing, exhibit repair and other assignments generally from the museum's library and art departments which can be done at home under the guidance of museum staff workers. Olive Bugbee, curator of art, and Bill Harrison, museum anthropologist, work closely with the auxiliary's members in their fields.

During the past year, the museum auxiliary has given a total of 880 1/2 volunteer hours service to the museum through the participation of 26 members as the annual report for April 1, 1976 shows.

The one hour guided tours account for 92 1/2 hours of the total volunteer hours while library projects add 490 1/2 hours and the library has purchased a serving cart for use at museum functions and is presently purchasing a set of bicentennial teaspoons for the museum's use at future teas and receptions.

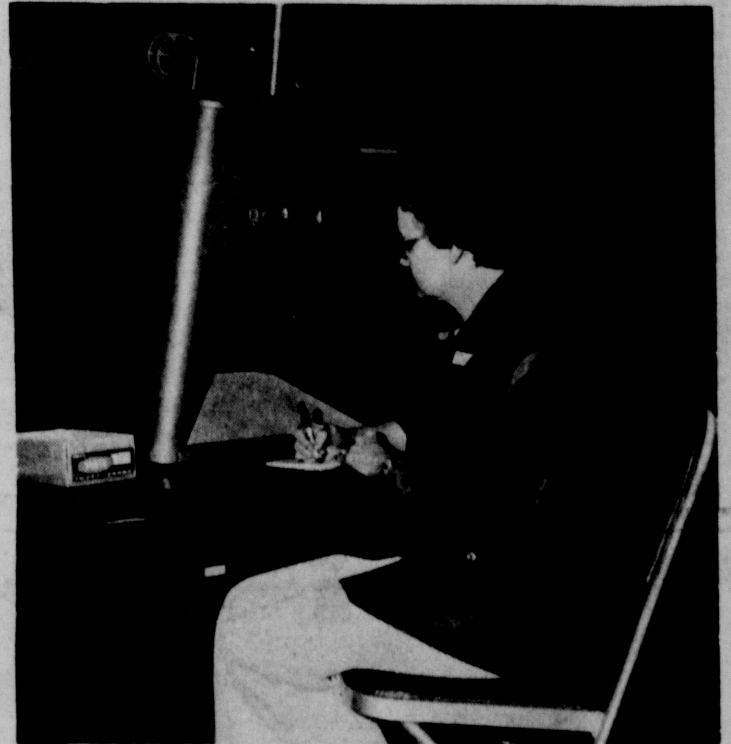

The auxiliary's most recent project was as hostess committee-souvenir shop committee added 111 1/2 hours to the overall volunteer service total. Costume restoration accounts for 68 of the total volunteer hours given during the past year.

As a service group, the auxil-

History of the area is preserved at the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum and is visited by local and area residents throughout the year with over 135,000 registered visitors inspecting the historic materials during 1975. Over 8,250 additional individuals were briefed on the historic contents of the museum by staff workers who spoke throughout the area. The museum is located on the southwest corner of the West Texas State University campus and is open at no charge to visitors.

Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum Auxiliary member, Christine McGlasson, spends a part of her service hours cataloguing newspapers and other printed documents in the third floor library segment of the museum.

As a duty for the social life of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum Auxiliary, Betty Markham, oftentimes arranges special refreshments such as at the recent annual meeting where Dr. James Hanson, museum curator, was being served.

Barbara Sawvell, volunteer auxiliary member, explains about early day banking in the Panhandle to an educational tour group from Perryton Public Schools which visited the museum this spring.

Billie Erwin, left, and Bobbie Henson of the Panhandle-Plains Historical Museum's Auxiliary spend a good deal of their service hours doing home research on various assignments to aid the museum staff.

Art competition for "TEXAS" is part of drama opening

The Art Competition subject for the opening of the musical drama "Texas" for the Bicentennial year will be "Memories."

The Gala Opening for the drama's 11th season will feature the first permanent settlers here, the cattlemen, and the paintings and photographs of "Memories" will be a fitting background for the ceremonies.

Preliminary judging will be based on slides and photographs. These are to be in the "Texas" office, 2010 Fourth Ave., Canyon, Tex. 79015 by 5 p.m., Wednesday, June 2, 1976. The judges will make their first selection and notify those who have placed so that they may have their originals sent to the same address in time for the final judging on June 16.

Pictures in the final judging will be awarded Honorable Mention and will be hung at the opening of "Texas" if the weather permits and also in the Panhandle Plains Historical Museum for a month thereafter.

In addition to the exhibitions, the ten winning artists in each class will receive two tickets to "Texas" for opening night. On that evening, plaques will be awarded from the stage for First Place in each class and for Best-of-Show.

For further information about the Competition, and for the drama "Texas," write Box 268, Canyon, Tex. 79015 or call 806-655-2182. (After 6 p.m. call 806-488-3100.)

Special economics course slated at WT

A special course to acquaint public school teachers with economic principles will be available at West Texas State University the second summer term.

"The Market System: Does It Work?" will be offered July 9-27 from 12:30 to 3:40 p.m. Some full tuition plus book stipends will be available, for those teaching in relevant areas, although enrollment in the course is not limited to teachers.

Course instructor Allen Early will look at the "Ways we have diverged from the traditional market determination of prices."

"Considering the increasing amount of regulation of our system, we are apparently attempting to override the effects of the market system through the political system," he notes. "Perhaps many people do not realize how much regulation there is."

Facets of the American economy already regulated include the freight lines, the airlines, the railroads and banks. Teachers participating in the course will be expected to develop lesson plans to incorporate economic principles into the subject area which they teach, Dr. Early says.

Registration for the workshop will be July 8 in the WTSU Activities Center, according to the prescribed schedule listed in the WTSU summer catalog.

For more information, contact Dr. Allen Early, WTSU Department of Economics, Canyon, Texas 79016.
